Mattie Lomax, Kept From Noose by The Times, Succumbs to Tuberculosis.

Within less than a year from the time She was saved from the gallows through the efforts of The Washington Times. Mattie Lomax, colored, convicted of the murder of her husband, died in the hospital ward of the District Jail of tuberculosis. Her death bears out the decla-rations made at the time that even as she stood in the shadow of the gallows, until her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by President Taft, she was marked for death by the white Thousands Signed Petitions.

After The Times took up the Lomax case, thousands of petitions poured in on the White House. The Times petitions, bearing 10,000 signatures protest-ing against the hanging were among these. One mass meeting was held at which 5,008 people voiced their dis-approval of the sentence of hanging.

on the nation's honor.

The appeals were not in vain. First sentenced to be hanged on July 31, 1911, reprieves were repeatedly granted until on August 12, 1912, President Taft commuted the sentence to life imprisonment, declaring that the evidence left room for doubt that the crime had ominent among the men who joined Times in its campaign against the death sentence for the woman was Con gressman Caleb Powers, who himself had been in the shadow of the gallows after conviction for alleged conspiracy in the murder of former Governor Goebel of Kentucky.

Powers Defended Woman.

Congressman Power declared it would be a "stain on the national honor" to hang the woman for her crime. He pointed out that one woman. Mrs. Surratt, had been sentenced to hang in the District, for complicity in the murder of President Lincoln, but her sentence had been passed by a military and not a civil tribunal.

Before Mattie Lomax died yesterday of tuberculosis, after remaining at the point of death for months, her mind had shown sings of giving way, and her friends feared that she would become insane. Death not only brought an end to her sufferings, but to the perplexity of the Department of Justice, who did not know what to do with her, as she was refused admission to penitentiaries because of being a tuberculosis victim, and the jail officials objected to taking care of a life prisoner.

Conviction for Murder.

The crime for which the woman died in imprisonment was the fatal shooting of her husband, Cecil Lomax, December 16, 1910, at his home, 1838 Eighteenth street northwest. She sur-rendered to the police, declaring her husband had shot himself while enexecuted, when clemency was shown at the last moment.

SCHOOLS FOR U. S.

If there are any young boys and girls of Washington who would like to attend school in Guatemala now is the time to speak up, because, as the result of diplomatic exchanges between Senor Don Joaquin Mendez, the Guatemalan minister to the United States and Secretary Bryan, the Central American republic has offered to give free instruction, including tuition, lodg-ing, board, uniforms and washing, to five American boys or girls in the offi-cial establishments of instruction in cial establishments of instruction in that country.

All that Guatemala asks in exchange is reciprocal privileges from institutions in this country, the primary object being to provide mutual advantages in the learning of Spanish and English.

The original proposition offered the American Government five scholarships in return for as many from this Government, butwhile Mr. Bryan has notified the minister that this Government is not in a position to appoint persons. is not in a position to appoint persons for these scholarships directly, it will be glad to assist in the selection of students and to suggest to American institutions the propriety of reciprocating the favor.

The Safest Investments

Are those that do not fluctuate during dis-turbed conditions of the money or stock mar-kets. First deed of trust notes (first mort-gages), well secured on real estate in the District of Columbia, constitute "gilt-edge" investments. They do not depend upon the financial responsibility of individuals or cor-porations for their stability, and are exempt from taxation as personal property. We can supply such investments in amounts from $500 upward. Send for booklet. "Concerning Loans and Investments."
